NEW ADDITIONS TO WA-WA-SUM CLUB

FINEST LOG CABIN ON RIVER

Additions Made to Old Building, New Garage and Other Structures.

James Bell, E. J. Marshall and Mrs. J. K. Secor, all of Toledo, are about the most pleased people you can imagine over the new log cabin that has just been completed at their club on the AuSable river. The new cabin is charming, and as cozy and comfortable a club house as exists on any of the rivers in Crawford county.

This, together with the other buildings and additions were built by J. E. Kellogg of Lovells. It is 118 feet in length, facing the river; the main part is 29x40 feet, with sections at each end 31x40 feet. The entire structure is built of white and Norway pine. At the gables at each end of the cabin the logs are arranged in the shape of an open fan, making a very pretty effect.

The main section of the cabin will be used as a lounge room. In this room there is a massive fire place, 12 feet wide with a six foot opening. This, like the foundation of the building, is built of noble stone, and matches well with the outside appearance of the cabin. These were built by W. H. Ketzbeck of this city, and Mr. Kellogg says, are as good specimens of mason work as he has ever seen. The wings of the cabin each contain four rooms and the interior of each has the appearance of an individual log cabin and is exceptionally clever and attractive. These eight rooms will be used as sleeping apartments with the exception of one which will be used for serving light lunches.

There is a bath room in each end of the new cabin, and each room contains a lavatory with running hot and cold water. The building is heated by two hot air furnaces. There is a basement under the entire middle section of the cabin 10x29 feet in size. Work in the building that surrounds the outside entrance to the basement are the words "Wa-Wa-Sum, 1922," done in white birch about two inches in diameter. A large sandstone, 14x40 feet, faces the river. This will be screened in. A unique porch seat made by splitting lengthwise a 14 inch Norway pine log, is built into the porch.

Besides this new cabin, several rooms have been added to the old quarters, by building an addition size 11x32 feet to be used as sleeping quarters. This also contains bath, lavatories and toilets. Here is also quarters for the guides, size 14x18, with screened porch. A new underground cement cistern has been built for the convenience of the culinary department.

About a hundred yards from the cabins is a new garage, size 24x40 feet, with a 14x20 foot lean-to for ice, and one 18x20 feet to be used as a stable for milch cows.

Wa-Wa-Sum is as comfortable and complete as money can make it, and is a credit to its owners and also Mr. Kellogg whose splendid workmanship made its success possible. The latter says that he was ably assisted in the carpenter work by George Lewellen and a crew of good helpers. The mason work was done by W. H. Ketzbeck, the plumbing by Al Cramer and the installation work on the furnaces and the eavetroughing by L. J. Kraus, all of Grayling.

When the writer visited the place a few days ago, none of the furnishings had been placed. When this is done this is certain to be one of the coziest and pleasantest river club houses on the AuSable river.

BAY CITY HAS MODERN FREE TOURIST CAMP.

Under the direction of the Bay City Motor Club, there will be operated at Wenona Beach on the shores of Saginaw Bay, a modern free tourists camp site. Permits are issued by the Motor Club, and tourists' privileges include a bathing beach, free lights, filtered ice water, cooking facilities and all of the privileges of the Wenona Beach resort. Also a reading room is being fitted up for the use of tourists, and we would very much appreciate your sending a copy of your publication for June, July, August and September to Free Reading Room, Wenona Beach Auto Tourists Camp, Bay City, Mich., and Grayling people may find on the there weekly copies of their home paper—the Avalanche.

Also Troitke for the visitors seemed to have something on the ball that kept the Grayling sluggers guessing for many innings. His team mates behind him played wonderful ball and robbed the Grayling batters of a number of possible hits. Bay City put up a remarkable game and made Grayling play ball

Farm Bureau Notes

R. D. BAILEY
County Agricultural Agent

Free Show.

How we all like to hear the welcome announcement, "Free Show." That seems to mean something for nothing. We all go. We enjoy ourselves and go again, of course, only for the children's sake.

How we like to fill up to the limit on anything that is free!

One time, I let a farmer stand his horse in my barn for the noon hour. That farmer crowded, crammed and stuffed the manger with our good alfalfa hay to such an extent that, after his horse had eaten until it looked like a snake that had swallowed a rat, bit, or three-pound rat terrier dog that had eaten a six-pound ham, and had been taken away, there remained in the manger enough hay to feed our work team several feeds.

How could we blame the farmer? He was showing appreciation of our alfalfa hay; and, he was getting something free.

Free Show Covers Several Acres. Our free show is not a dinky one like medicine shows. It is a big one. It covers acres and acres.

Competent judges have seen it and say it is good, worth anyone's trouble to come from any part of the county to see.

Where It Is.

Our show is on the old State Farm, just out of Grayling, just past the county infirmary. Splendid gravel road all the way. Gates are now unlocked. Every man in the county who longs to grow clover, alfalfa, sweet clover or vetch is doing himself injustice if he fails to go down there at once.

There, in the midst of the lightest soil in the county, one will see a strip of typical dewberry bushes and sweet fern and sand; then, all at once, come upon a block of sweet clover, stretching away, tall, rank and dark green, and ready to cut June 5th.

Then, there are plots of mammoth clover, and of the much-to-be-desired alfalfa.

Alfalfa! Magic word. Probably every thinking farmer secretly wishes he had some of it.

No Need to Sigh.

There is no need for any farmer to sigh in a kind of patient resignation to his fate and say, "Yes, alfalfa is wonderful for soil and for feed; but, we can't grow it up here."

Man, that kind of talk is all bunk or punk, or something of that useless nature. Who settled it that we can not grow alfalfa on every farm in this county?

I do not hesitate to say that I can grow alfalfa in field lots, on any farm in the county.

Buck up man and have some alfalfa for yourself.

Have some sweet clover, too.

It was not by accident that we got those luxuriant growths on the State Farm. We simply complied with the rules of the game.

The Lord does not smile on the efforts of the county agent or the agricultural college, and frown on yours if you keep as close to the rules of the game.

No, We Didn't.

Now, don't try to crawl out by saying: "Well, they did it regardless of expense, and had the whole state back of them."

We simply used adapted seed on a well prepared seed bed, treated to some fertilizer and lime.

Any Farmer Can.

Any farmer can fertilize a piece of land for corn, soy, with barn yard manure—keep the corn clean, and follow it with alfalfa or sweet clover put on with two tons pulverized limestone per acre.

Suppose it is a five-acre block. That calls for ten tons of limestone. Those who drew limestone from Horrigan Switch found that it cost $2.60 a ton for the lime in sacks, and $1.05 a ton freight—just $3.65 a ton in all. Ten tons, then, cost $36.50.

Quite a lot of money. Does not grow on every bush. A man, full of determination could plan and work and save and find ways to get that money.

If he is full of the unconquerable spirit of the people of Carthage whose women, even, made bow-strings of hair and were not beaten, he will find a way or make one.

The alfalfa on one acre, the first year it is cut, repays the cost of the limestone for the whole five-acre block.

Too Many.

There are too many in charge of land in this county who are of man's size but who do not rise to man-sized effort in managing that land.

Not Yet, Too Late.

There is, even yet, a little time in which a block of alfalfa or sweet clover can be put in.

Every Barn Bursting.

There is no good reason why every farm in the county should not be bursting full of feed this fall. Lime yet to plant more hill corn (fodder corn). Then, there is soy beans, Sudan grass, Hubbard clover, and millet for those whose land will stand it.

Every barn can be bursting. Then feed these valuable feeds out to cows that are really worthy of it. If you have kept two cows before, keep four hereafter. If you kept three, keep six. Have cow products to sell in quantity large enough to enable you to live better.

Are You Going To Keep Your Word?

A lot of farmers put in vetch and ripe last fall, promising the land that the crop would be plowed in, not taken off land already overburdened.

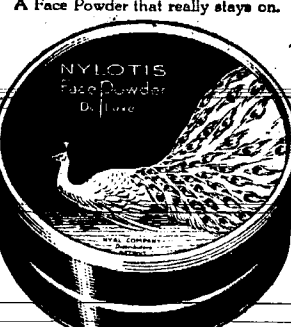

Brother, remember that promise for the land's sake.

There is a tide in the affairs of men, which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune.

Neglected, leads on to poverty and want.

GRAYLING WON BAY CITY SERIES

TOOK THREE GAMES IN ROW. FINISH WITH 2-1 GAME.

Base Ball Season Formally Opened. Good Games Scheduled.

The Grayling base ball team formally opened the season last Sunday by defeating the Bay City West Sides 14 to 11.

Again on Monday bats were crossed with the same team and again Grayling came across with a goodly number of tallies, defeating the visitors 12 to 6. Tuesday, Decoration day it was different; the scoring was sparse and only came in the closing innings, resulting 2 to 1 in favor of Grayling.

While the scores were large in the first two games, they were full of interest and thrills. Babe Laurent and E. Johnson were the battery for the Sunday game. They were up against a bunch of players that had been in action for several weeks. Laurent blanked the first three men up, and his team mates piled up 4 runs in the same frame.

The game stood 12 to 5 at the 4th inning. Grayling annexed three more in the 6th and the visitors won scores less until the 9th when they ran in 6 scores. This was their big inning and was marked by several hits, three of which were for two stations. Kelley and Gerhart were the battery for Bay City. Kelly was replaced on the mound in the 4th by Atwood.

Monday Game. Batteries for Grayling on Monday were Grant Salisbury and E. Johnson. This was the former's first appearance in the box for the locals and he made a fine showing. For Bay City Atwood, Zebell and Troitke. The attendance was not as good that day as on the day before. It was a fine game and those who did attend were well repaid for the money they gave.

The score by innings was as follows:
Bay City 0 0 0 0 2 0 4 0-6-8-4
Grayling 0 1 0 0 0 0 2 x-12-15-5
Umpires Gus Nelson and Eno Milnes.

Decoration Day Game.

Decoration day saw a much larger crowd at the ball park than on either of the other two days. While the day was bright there was early evidence of the gathering of rain clouds that

HENRY SPEARMAN

SYNOPSIS.—Wealthy and highly placed in the Chicago business world, Benjamin Corvet is a somber, a recluse and a mystery to his associates. After a stormy interview with his partner, Henry Spearman, Corvet seeks Constance Sherrill, daughter of his business partner, Lawrence Sherrill, and secures from her a promise not to marry Spearman. He then disappears. Spearman, who has written to a certain Alan Conrad, in Blue Rapids, Kansas, and exhibited strange agitation over the matter. Corvet's letter summons Conrad, a youth of unknown parentage, to Chicago. Alan arrives in Chicago. From a statement of Sherrill it seems probable that Conrad is Corvet's illegitimate son. Corvet has devised his house and its contents to Alan, who takes possession. That night Alan discovers a man ransacking the desks and bureau drawers in Corvet's apartments. The appearance of Alan tremendously agitates the intruder, who utters a threat to kill him and vanishes. "The Miwaka." After a struggle the man escapes.

CHAPTER V.—Continued.

Alan took up his hat and looked about the house; he was going to return and sleep here of course; he was not going to leave the house unguarded for any long time after this; but after what had just happened, he felt he could leave it safely for half an hour, particularly if he left a light burning within.

He did this and stepped over to the Sherrills. The man who answered the ring recognized him at once and admitted him; in reply to Alan's question, the servant said that Mr. Sherrill had not yet returned. When Alan went to his room, the valet appeared and, finding that Alan was packing, the man offered his service. Alan let him pack and went downstairs a moment later just driven up to the house.

It proved to have brought Constance and her mother, Mrs. Sherrill, after informing Alan that Mr. Sherrill would not return until some time later, went upstairs and did not appear again. Constance followed her mother but ten minutes later, came downstairs.

"You're not staying here tonight?" she asked.

"I wanted to say to your father."

Alan explained, "I believe I had better go over to the other house."

"Are you taking any one with you?" she inquired.

"Any one?"

"A servant, I mean."

"No."

"Then you'll let us lend you a man from here."

"You're awfully good, but I don't think I'll need anyone tonight. I'll get along very well until then."

She was silent a moment as she looked away. Her shoulders suddenly jerked a little. "I wish you'd take some one with you," she persisted. "I don't like to think of you alone over there."

"My father must have been often alone there."

"Yes," she said. "Yes." She looked at him quickly, then away, checking a question. She wanted to ask, he knew, what he had discovered in that lonely house which had so agitated him; for of course she had noticed agitation in him. And he had intended to tell her, or, rather, her father. He had been rehearsing to himself the description of the man he had met there in order to ask Sherrill about him; but now Alan knew that he was not going to refer the matter even to Sherrill just yet.

Sherrill had believed that Benjamin Corvet's disappearance was from circumstances too personal and intimate to be made a subject of public inquiry; and what Alan had encountered in Corvet's house had confirmed that belief. Sherrill further had said that Benjamin Corvet, if he had wished, Sherrill to know those circumstances, would have told them to him; but Corvet had not done that; instead, he had sent for Alan, his son. He had given him his confidence.

Sherrill had admitted that he was withholding from Alan, for the time being, something that he knew about Benjamin Corvet; it was nothing, he had said, which would help Alan to learn about his father, or what had become of him; but perhaps Sherrill, not knowing these other things, could not speak accurately as to that. Alan determined to ask Sherrill what he had been withholding, before he told him all of what had happened in Corvet's house. There was one other circumstance which Sherrill had mentioned but not explained; it occurred to Alan now.

"Miss Sherrill," he checked himself.

"What is it?"

"This afternoon your father said that you believed that Mr. Corvet's disappearance was in some way connected with you; he said that he did not think that was so; but do you want to tell me why you thought it?"

"Yes; I will tell you." She colored quickly. "One of the last things Mr. Corvet did—in fact, the last thing we know of his doing before he sent for you—was to come to me and warn me against one of my friends."

"Warn you, Miss Sherrill? How? I mean, warn you against what?"

"Against thinking too much of him."

"I think I'll come to see your father in the morning," Alan said, when Constance looked back to him.

"But you'll come over here for breakfast in the morning?"

"You want me?"

"Certainly."

"I'd like to come very much."

"Then I'll expect you." She followed him to the door when he had put on his things, and he made no objection when she asked that the man be allowed to carry his bag around to the other house.

When he had dismissed Simon and reentered the house on Astor street, he found no evidences of any disturbance while he had been gone. On the second floor, to the east of the room which had been his father's, was a bedroom which evidently had been kept as a guest chamber; Alan carried his suitcase there and made ready for the night.

The sight of Constance Sherrill standing and watching after him in concern as he started back to this house, came to him again and again, and also, her flush when she had spoken of the friend against whom Benjamin Corvet had warned her. Who was he? It had been impossible at that moment for Alan to ask her, but now he would have learned only a name which he could not place yet in any connection with her or with Benjamin Corvet. Whoever he was, it was plain that Constance Sherrill "thought of him." Lucky man, Alan said to himself. Yet Corvet had warned her not to think of him.

Alan turned back his bed. It had been for him a tremendous day. Barely seven hours before he had come to that house, Alan Conrad from Blue Rapids, Kan., now phrases through his mind as he opened the door of the room to be able to hear any noise in Benjamin Corvet's house, of which he was sole protector. The emotion raised by his first sight of the lake went through him again as he opened the window to the east.

Now the was in bed—he seemed to be standing, a spectator before a man who was speaking of Benjamin Corvet and the souls of men dead. "And the lake above the eye?" The bullet got down. "So it's you that got Ben?"

"I'll get you!" "You can't save the Miwaka!"

He thought of that name—the strange how even that to him; it had been running through his consciousness almost constantly since he had heard it. He jumped up and named on the high and found a pencil. He did not know how to spell the name, and it was not necessary to write it down; the name had been in that definiteness and ineffable quality of a thing which once heard, can never again be forgotten. But, in spite of that, he wrote it, he wrote it, pressing at the spelling—"Miwaka."

It was a name, of course; but the name of what? It repeated and repeated itself to him, after he got back into bed, until its very iteration made him drowsy.

Outside, the pale, whistled and shrieked. The wind passing its last resistance after its sweep across the prairies before it leaped upon the lake, battered and clamored in its assault about the house. But as Alan became sleeper, he heard it no longer as it rattled the windows and howled under the eaves and over the roof, but as out on the lake, above the roaring and crunching waves, it whipped and circled with its chill the ice-shrouded sides of struggling ships. So, with the roar of surf and gale in his ears, he went to sleep with the sole conscious connection in his mind between himself and these people, among whom Benjamin Corvet's summons had brought him, the one name—"Miwaka."

CHAPTER VI.

The Dead in Trust.

Memory, if Alan could call it that, had given him a feeling for ships and for the lake. But these recollections were only what those of a three-year-old child might have been. Not only did they refuse to connect themselves with anything else, but by the very finality of their isolation, they warned him that they—and perhaps a few more vague memories of similar sort—were all that recollection ever would give him. He caught himself together and turned his thoughts to the approaching visit to Sherrill—and his father's offices. He had accepted Constance Sherrill's invitation to drive him downtown to his destination.

Observing the towering buildings to his right, he was able to identify some of the more prominent structures, familiar from photographs of the city,

Constance drove swiftly a few blocks down this boulevard; then, with a sudden, "Here we are!" she shot the car to the curb and stopped. She led Alan into one of the tallest and best-looking buildings.

On several of the doors opening upon the wide marble hall where the elevator left them, Alan saw the names, "Corvet, Sherrill and Spearman."

Constance led the way on past to a door farther down the corridor, which bore merely the name, "Lawrence Sherrill"; evidently Sherrill, who had interests aside from the shipping business, had offices connected with but not actually a part of the offices of Corvet, Sherrill and Spearman. A girl on guard at the door, saying that Mr. Sherrill had been awaiting Mr. Conrad, opened an inner door and led Alan into a large, many-windowed room, where Sherrill was sitting alone before a table. He pulled the visitor's chair rather close to his desk and to his own big leather chair before asking Alan to seat himself.

"You wanted to tell me, or ask me, something last night, my daughter has told me," Sherrill said cordially. "I'm sorry I wasn't home when you came here."

"I wanted to ask you, Mr. Sherrill," Alan said, "about those facts in regard to Mr. Corvet which you mentioned to me yesterday but did not explain. You said it would not do me to know them; but I found certain things in Mr. Corvet's house last night which made me want to know if I could, everything you could tell me."

Sherrill opened a drawer and took out a large, plain envelope.

"In the day after your father disappeared," he said, "but before I knew he was gone—or before any one except my daughter felt any alarm about him—I received a short note from him. The note was written, almost thoughtless, it told me he had sent for you—Alan Conrad of Blue Rapids, Kansas."

"And spoke of you as though you were some one I ought to have known about, and commended you to my care. The remainder of it was merely an agitation, almost indecipherable scrawl to me. When I opened the envelope, a note had fallen out. The note made no reference to the key, but, comparing it with one I had in my pocket, I saw that it appeared to be a key to a safety-deposit box in the vaults of a company where we both had boxes."

"The note, taken in connection with my daughter's alarm about him, made it plain that something serious had happened to Corvet, that my first thought was merely for him—Corvet was not a man with whom one could readily connect the thought of suicide; but, that was the idea I had. I hurried at once to his house, but he was not there, and I could not get in. His servant, Wassaquan, has very few friends, and the few times he has been away from home of recent years have been when he visited an acquaintance of his—the head porter in a South Side hotel. I went to the telephone in the house next door and called the hotel and found Wassaquan there. I told him over the telephone,

"I want to see you."

"I'll get you!" "You can't save the Miwaka!"

only that something was wrong, and hurried to my own home to get the key, which I had, to the Corvet house; but when I came back and let myself into the house, I found it empty and with no sign of anything having happened.

"The next morning, Alan, I went to the safe deposit vaults as soon as they were open. I presented the numbered key and was told that it belonged to a box rented by Corvet, and that Corvet had arranged about three days before for me to have access to the box if I presented the key. I had only to sign my name in their book and open the box. In it, Alan, I found the pictures of you which I showed you yesterday and the very strange communications that I am going to show you now."

Sherrill opened the long envelope, from which several thin, folded papers fell. He picked up the largest of these, which consisted of several sheets fastened together with a clip, and handed it to Alan without comment. Alan, as he looked at it and turned the pages, saw that it contained two columns of typewriting carried from page to page after the manner of an account.

The column to the left was an inventory of property and profits and income by months and years, and the one to the right was a list of losses and expenditures. Beginning at an indefinite date or month in the year 1895, there was set down in a lump sum what was indicated as the total of Benjamin Corvet's holdings at that time. To this, in sometimes unrelated items, the income had been added. In the opposite column, beginning apparently from the same date in 1895, were the missing man's expenditures.

Alan having ascertained that the papers contained only this account, looked up questioning to Sherrill; but Sherrill, without speaking, merely handed him the second of the papers.

Alan unfolded it and saw that it was a letter written in the same hand which had written the summons he had received in Blue Rapids and had made the entries in the little memorandum book of the remittances that had been sent to John Welton.

It began simply:

"Lawrence."

"This will come to you in the event that I am not able to carry out the plan upon which I am now, at last, determined. You will find with this a list of my possessions. Deeds for all real estate executed and complete except for recording of the transfer at the county office, bonds, certificates, and other documents representing my ownership of property, together with signed forms for their legal transfer to you, are in this box. These papers, if, in their entirety, I give to you in trust to hold for the young man now known as Alan Conrad of Blue Rapids, Kan., to deliver any part or all over to him or to continue to hold it all in trust for him as you shall consider to be to his greatest advantage."

"This for the reasons which I shall have told to you or him—I cannot know which one of you now, nor do I know how I shall tell it. But when you learn Lawrence's plan as well as the as you can and help him to be charitable to me."

"With the earnest affection,"

"BENJAMIN CORVET."

Alan, as he finished reading, looked up to Sherrill, bewildered and dazed.

"What does it mean, Mr. Sherrill?"

"Does it mean that he has gone away and left everything he had—everything to me?"

"If Mr. Corvet does not return, and I do not receive any other instructions, I shall take over his estate, as he has instructed, for your advantage."

"And Mr. Sherrill, he didn't tell you why? This is all you know?"

"Yes; you have everything now. All we can do, Alan, is to search for him in every way we can. There will be others searching for him too now; for information of his disappearance has got out. There have been reporters at the office this morning making inquiries, and his disappearance will be in the afternoon papers."

Sherrill put the papers back in their envelope, and the envelope back into the drawer, which he relocked.

"I went over all this with Mr. Spearman this morning," he said. "He is as much at a loss to explain it as I am. He was silent for a few moments."

"The transfer of Mr. Corvet's property to me for you," he said suddenly, "includes, as you have seen, Corvet's interest in the firm of 'Corvet, Sherrill & Spearman.' I went very carefully through the deeds and transfers in the deposit box, and it was plain that, while he had taken great care with the forms of transfer for all the properties, he had taken particular pains with whatever related to his holdings in this company and to his shipping interests. If I make over the properties to you, Alan, I shall begin with those; for it seems to me that your father was particularly anxious that you should take a personal as well as a financial place among the men who control the traffic of the lakes. I have told Spearman that this is my intention. He has not been able to see it my way as yet; but he may change his views; I think, after meeting you."

Sherrill got up, Alan arose a little unsteadily. The list of properties he had read and the letter and Sherrill's statement perturbed so much that its meaning could not all come to him at once. He followed Sherrill through a short private corridor, flanked with files lettered "Corvet, Sherrill, and Spearman," into the large room he had seen when he came in with Constance. They crossed this, and Sherrill, without knocking, opened the door of the office marked, "Mr. Spearman." Alan, looking on past Sherrill as the door opened, saw that there were some half dozen men in the room, smoking and talking. His gaze went swiftly on past these men to the one who, half seated on the top of the flat desk, had been talking to them; and his pulse closed upon his heart with a shock; he started, choked with astonishment, then swiftly forced himself under control. For this was the man whom he had met and whom he had fought in Benjamin Corvet's house the night before—the big man surprised in his blasphemy of Corvet and of souls "in him"—who, at sight of an apparition with a bullet hole above its eye, had cried out in his fright, "You got Ben! But you won't get me—do you?—Do you?"

Alan's shoulders drew up slightly, and the muscles of his hands tightened, as Sherrill led him to this man. Sherrill put his hand on the man's shoulder; his other hand was still on Alan's arm.

"Henry," he said to the man, "this is Alan Conrad. Alan, I want you to know my partner, Mr. Spearman."

Spearman nodded an acknowledgment, but did not put out his hand; his eyes—steady, bold, watchful eyes—seemed measuring Alan attentively; and he turned Alan, with his gaze, was measuring him.

CHAPTER VII.

Mr. Corvet's Partner.

The instant of meeting, when Alan recognized in Sherrill's partner, the man with whom he had fought in Corvet's house, was one of swift readjustment of all his thought—adjustment to a situation of which he could not even have dreamed, and which left him breathless. But for Spearman obviously, it was not that. Following his noncommittal nod of acknowledgment of Sherrill's introduction and his first steady scrutiny of Alan, the big, handsome man swung himself off from the desk on which he sat and leaned against it, facing them more directly.

"Oh, yes—Conrad," he said. His tone was hearty, but it Alan could see that he was not. "You're a new one."

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promise of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited, to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments; corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by Parcel Post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Birmingham, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores. Advertisement.

He Got His Answer.

A local candidate, who has been vigorously stamping the county, in view of the coming primary, got a pat answer at one place at which he was seeking votes. After looking around he could see nobody but a future voter of the recently reformed sex; but when he left he realized that the "female of the species is more deadly than the male" at repartee. "Where is you pa, missy?" he inquired in inquiring manner. "He's burying the dog, mister," was the reply. "Why, what happened to the dog?" said the sympathetic candidate. "He barked himself to death, barking at candidates," was the unsympathetic answer.

It was necessary for them to flee in their night clothes, the fire had gained such headway before being discovered. All was covered by insurance.

Mrs. Rhoda King, of Frederic, known in that village as Grandma Barber and who is soon to celebrate her 90th birthday, is in the city visiting relatives and friends, a guest at the home of one of her old friends, Mrs. O. Milnes. Mrs. King came to Frederic fifty years ago where she has since resided. She is a remarkable old lady, walks with quick step and says she enjoying good health. She is the mother of C. S. Barber of Frederic.

Mrs. Hanley with a party of four ladies from Detroit are guests of the Underhill Club.

A party of ten men from West Branch are enjoying an outing, fishing on Big Creek.

Mr. and Mrs. Kinney of Kalkaska are at Lou's Camp cooking for some fishermen.

A large crowd from various places camp and spent Decoration Day at the North Branch Outing Club.

C. P. Michelson of Mason is again able to enjoy the trout fishing along the AuSable after a long illness.

Margaret Douglas spent Sunday in Lovells. She was accompanied by Margaret Husted of West Branch returning Monday morning to their school duties.

Word has been received that Mrs. A. R. Caid is improving after an operation for gall stone trouble at Mercy Hospital at Grayling.

John Moon and wife have moved into the Papenhus house. The former expects to work in the mill this summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Lovells of Lovells were called to Lovells one day last week. They are visiting relatives near Luzerne.

For Ten Dollars and Ninety Cents—This 30 x 3 1/2 Usco

THE 30 x 3 1/2 tire situation today is just this—The man who buys an USCO at $10.90 is justified in believing that his money is going farther in tire value than it ever has gone or could go before.

Naturally he appreciates the quality of USCO. That was established long ago.

It is still fresh in his mind that USCO led the national market into the $10.90 price range.

The makers of U.S. Tires always intended the 30 x 3 1/2 USCO to be the highest value in its field.

At $10.90 it creates a new classification of money's worth.

"Shop Around"

In a recent article on business conditions, printed in Leslie's Weekly, Secretary Hoover sums up his able analysis in this sound advice to the consumer—"Shop Around."

Briefly, this hard-headed authority urges you to compare values critically, to satisfy yourself that you are getting the most for your money, to determine where you can most profitably invest your money—in everything you buy.

Publication of this statement here is ample evidence that we heartily agree with Secretary Hoover—that we have the utmost confidence in the quality and value of our merchandise.

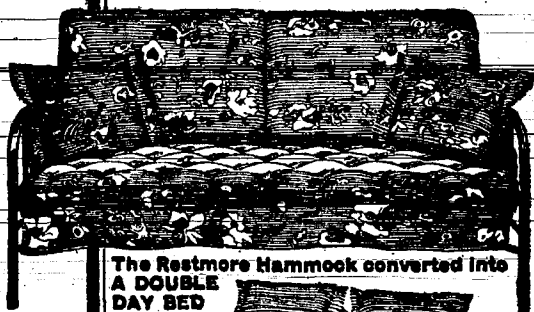

We frankly advise you to "Shop Around"—always bearing in mind that real value is determined by quality—not low price. We gladly leave the decision to your good judgment.

St. Augustine Has Oldest P. O.
St. Augustine, Fla.—This city has the oldest post office building in the United States, according to Postmaster Charles E. Hopkins. Records of the "Archives of the Indies" at Seville, Spain, declares Hopkins, show that the structure was erected some time between 1598 and 1603 by Gonzalo Mondez. The king of Spain purchased the building in 1804 and made it residence for the Spanish governors of Florida. It was used as such until the United States purchased Florida in 1821.

He declared the idea was unsound financially and would lead to com-

CHERISH WORLD WAR RELIC

Pillar From Altar of Church in Ruined Village of Belleau at National Headquarters.

One of the most treasured of the many World War relics being gathered at the American Legion's national headquarters, Indianapolis, Ind., is that just received from the battlefields of France. It is a pillar from the altar of a church which once stood in the ruined village of Belleau, adjacent to the famed wood of that name, near Chateau-Thierry.

The wooden pillar bears honorable scars; those suffered when scores of German high-explosive shells crashed into the little church, and one shell fell ment all but tore the pillar in halves, but when the marines and the infantry had driven back the enemy and recaptured the town, far beneath the mass of stone and mortar the altar was found intact.

Upon returning to their devastated home the French villagers looked upon the little altar as a good omen and set about to clear up their ruined church building. Later they removed one of the altar pillars, and after appropriate ceremonies, sent it to America as the gift of appreciation of the courage of Belleau to the Yankee regiments through their organization of the Legion. The pillar is carefully preserved at the Legion's headquarters, protected by the French and American flags.

WILL PAY THE BUCKEYE BOYS

Robert Roberts, Former Commander of Ohio Department, Will Direct Disbursement.

The payment of $250,000 to nearly a quarter of a million of ex-servicemen is the first step which has been assigned to Robert R. Roberts of Youngstown, O., former vice-commander of the Ohio department of the American Legion. Mr. Roberts is director of a national organization in Ohio.

A recent major in the Thirty-second division during the World War, Mr. Roberts has been employed in the Carnegie Steel mills in Youngstown.

"Say, you oughta stay home a night or two and get a wink o' sleep," he said after he had found about a dozen errors in a letter he had dictated. The rebuke made her a bit wrathful and she replied:

"I suppose you would be glad to see me sitting around here singing a dirge instead of 'Ain't We Got Fun'?"

"No, I'm not that harsh," he answered, "but one thing's a cinch—your successor here is going to be a girl with a wooden leg."

His Accomplishment.
After testing the youngsters with numerous riddles, the school inspector was trying to impress upon them the importance of one point.

A youngster held up his hand. "And what is it?"

"I can read my own writing better than anyone else can," said the boy.

AIDS SICK AND WOUNDED MEN

Mrs. Maud Cudworth, Milwaukee, Wis., Is Known to Legion Boys Throughout the Mid-West.

Sick and wounded service men of the World War undergoing treatment in Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, Ohio, West Virginia, Kentucky, Kansas and Missouri know or are going to know before the year is out of Mrs. Maud Cudworth, Milwaukee, Wis., a national vice-president of the American Legion Auxiliary.

It is the duty of local units of the Auxiliary in towns where ex-servicemen are in hospitals to keep the disabled men supplied with little comforts and delicacies not provided by the government. The women write letters to the patients, send them newspapers, books, magazines, fruit, bathrobes, bed slippers, candy, cigarettes and special articles that they desire. Under Mrs. Cudworth's supervision, as president of the national welfare committee of the Auxiliary, this work is being done in the middle western states over which she has supervision. Mrs. Cudworth personally visits disabled service men in the hospitals of her territory, hears their complaints and takes them up with the proper government officials.

A Legion post of 1,000 men in Milwaukee adopted Mrs. Cudworth as "Mother" because she lost her only son during the World War.

TWO KINDS OF PROFITEERS

Mrs. Henrietta Starkey, Le Sueur, Minn., Cited by Legion Boys as Most Valuable.

There were two kinds of profiteers during the war—one had, the other sold—the service men of Le Sueur, Minn., claim one of the latter lives in Le Sueur and wears a cannon-metal decoration for the work which she did during the war to aid the war-torn and the service men. She is Mrs. Henrietta A. Starkey, owner of a moving picture theater, whose constant willingness to throw open the doors of her amusement house for Liberty bond, Red Cross and other campaigns won her the plaudits of all and caused her bank account to double.

One of the things which Mrs. Starkey did to arouse war time morale was to show the pictures of all the boys from Le Sueur who were in the service. In all, lights and heat in her theater were all furnished gratis for war-time community gatherings. The cost of the films which were of interest at the Starkey theater was paid by its proprietor and she funds to help the service men were donated so much more.

Le Sueur Legionnaires hold Mrs. Starkey up as the unusual who profited in their good will instead of cash.

GERMANY'S BIG LOSS IN WAR

Deaths Directly Traceable to the World Conflict Are Placed at About 1,000,000.

A study of the world records of the German war department shows that 10 men were killed and 100 wounded on the German side during every hour the World War raged. This estimate was arrived at by the American Legion.

It is estimated by General Von Altrick, one of the German "big command," that the German lost a total of 12,000,000 men during the war. Of which 1,000,000 were killed or died of wounds or sickness incident to their service. The largest figures are those of the number of Germans wounded who—General Altrick places at 4,200,000.

German deaths, directly traceable to the war, are placed at about 12,000,000.

Carrying On With the American Legion

Farmers gave 200 trees and the village gave a lot to the Elmhurst town (Ind.) post of the Legion when it voted a community home.

A "Gold Star" Legion organization, open to parents, sisters and brothers of men who have died in the World War, has been proposed.

A total of $250,000 yearly renewable term and converted government insurance is being furnished by ex-servicemen in the state of Washington.

War-time draft dodgers are prohibited from holding public office in New York state, a bill sponsored by the Legion to that effect having passed the general assembly.

Legion posts have been formed in Calcutta, India, New Zealand and Denmark, making a total of 11,000 posts located in practically every civilized country on the globe.

A large tract of land along the Potomac river, near Washington, D. C., has been turned over to the Legion and other organizations as a summer camp for disabled service men of Maryland and West Virginia.

The Legion in New York has received a letter saying: "I understand that the government will pay us war veterans adjusted compensation, with the option of taking land. I've just discovered a new island in the St. Lawrence river and I want that, if you can arrange it with the government."

A PACIFIC PARADISE

A Part of the Marquesan Paradise.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

What, in "the New Pacific" that the Washington conference is believed to have created, will be the future of France's island possessions nearest to the United States—the Marquesas? In a few years these fertile, lovely islands, now left practically alone, may be treated as a geographical clean slate, for the natives are rapidly dying.

The Spanish navigator, Mendana, first discovered the islands with two black chiefs, and saved through a series of adventures, once the order of a large volcano, which now serves as a landmark.

And, a tape savoring of Solomon in its wisdom, which could not weep. It would be a grave error to conclude from the natives mentioned that the life of the Marquesan woman was a hard one.

They Had No Agriculture.
Agriculture in any form was unknown. The natives took the necessities of life from the islands provided, but to assist nature in any way by tilling or sowing never occurred to them. Content with their gathering of the coconuts of the day, the Marquesans took literally no thought for the morrow.

The most favored intelligent in the Marquesas is the native, who, as it is more commonly known, the Marquesan. The natives took the necessities of life from the islands provided, but to assist nature in any way by tilling or sowing never occurred to them. Content with their gathering of the coconuts of the day, the Marquesans took literally no thought for the morrow.

From cascades, springing from the living rock high on the mountain side, the water falls in a series of terraces, the streams of which in the combined, to be lost in the mysterious depths of the black gorges far below. These waters wind through dark, tortuous ravines and form the racing stream that fills the deep, fertile valley of Hanalei, where it rushes over its rocky bed to pass into the blue waters of the quiet bay.

Beyond the crescent of white sand that lies between the cliffs, banana, mango, and breadfruit trees, mingle their brilliant foliage and blossoms with the slender brown trunks and waving fronds of the pandanus and coco palm.

Less than a century ago this forest was thickly dotted with the broad, thatched huts of the Hanaleians, each upon its unique platform of stone, constructed without mortar or cement. Thousands of these huts, to be seen in use, rising in the vertical sides of valleys and ridges in a state of perfect preservation, the platform usually 20 by 30 or 40 feet, level and unbroken, often raised 10 to 15 feet on the lower slope.

Beautiful Women, Fierce Men.
To describe the dainty, graceful Marquesan woman is to describe a beauty before God's advent and by the description open to the charge of exaggeration. But from Mendana to Stevenson, with Melville for good measure, her remarkable beauty was a source of surprise and admiration.

When women possess beautiful, luxuriant hair, fine eyes, perfect teeth, a shining, jeweled form, a skin of velvet texture and unspiced surfaces, and these physical attractions are combined with a variety of spirit and action, exaggeration becomes difficult; and unless all centuries of the islands have for several centuries agreed to deceive the world, such was the Marquesan; so she is today when sickness has not diminished her charms.

The men were fierce, cruel cannibals, of whose chief occupation, aside from the indulgence of their "native" proclivities, was the killing of both men and women of other tribes for gastronomic purposes.

The all-powerful tapu was the "law and the prophets" of the Marquesan.

Some of the tapus for the guidance of the women would probably include a sufficient to spectacular wrath. Without exception on any island, women might not eat "the pig"; nor brown pie, a delicacy much enjoyed by the four folks in the absence of the finger variety.

Nor daily with bonita or squid, the two fishes most in favor with the Marquesan palate.

Nor, except on special occasions, eat fresh breadfruit, bananas, or coconut. Nor could they go to market, a provision to keep them from being captured by enemies lurking outside the bay.

And, a tape savoring of Solomon in its wisdom, which could not weep. It would be a grave error to conclude from the natives mentioned that the life of the Marquesan woman was a hard one.

Prized Among Cannibals

Among the cannibals of New Guinea, according to W. F. Alder in his new book, "The Isle of Vanishing Men," no morsel is more prized at a feast than the left shoulder blade of a ten-year-old girl. It is recorded also that one roasted "long pig" will satisfy the hunger of 10 persons, but that it is considered more prudent to have one for every six feasters. When a raiding party of cannibals, says Mr.

Alger, finds a victim asleep, they always awaken him before killing him; the reason being that the first word he utters is used as the name of the next baby born in the settlement of the raiders.

AGRICULTURAL LIMESTONE

Why Use It?

The profitable use of agricultural limestone has been proven in practical results. A study of the soils of the glaciated area proves that many of them need limestone. Some were left with little or no lime content, others which may have had a fair supply at the beginning, of their cultivation have now reached through cropping and leaching, a condition of exhaustion. The rate of loss through leaching and cropping is equivalent to five hundred or more pounds per acre annually.

The elements of Calcium and Magnesium, of which limestone is composed, are essential for both a profitable and permanent agriculture. Dr. Thorne, Wooster Station, says: "When the land begins to need lime it is a waste of time, energy and money to continue cultivating it until this need is supplied, for the economical use of every other fertilizing material including manure, depends upon the lime supply. If that be deficient, everything else must fall short of its possible attainment."

How is this brought about? The average corn crop takes twenty-seven pounds; oat crop, twenty-three pounds; wheat crop, nineteen pounds; timothy one and one-half ton yield, forty pounds; clover two ton yield, one hundred pounds; and alfalfa four ton yield, two hundred pounds. These subtractions are constantly being made day and night and any farmer can readily understand that land which has been under cultivation fifty or more years would have a very much depleted, if not exhausted, limestone supply.

The land owner heretofore has wondered at his decreased yields and increased difficulties of tillage and cultivation. Clover refuses to grow, weeds become more abundant, crops diminish and profits disappear. The conservation and maintenance of soil fertility becomes the farmer's large problem. After many crops have been harvested, and when drainage, cultivation, and fertilization are neglected, the soil becomes sour. Soils are acid not because they contain free acids, but because in the absence of lime and magnesia to combine with the acids present, aluminum and iron combine with these acids, forming compounds which act the same as acids, and which are poisonous to most plants. When the land is in this condition there must be applied some agency which will neutralize the acid before it will again yield profitable crops. Agricultural limestone is the cheapest and best agency for this purpose.

In its early use the elements of limestone were regarded as fertilizers. They should not be so considered but as a soil amendment to correct unprofitable soil conditions. As a word of warning, agricultural limestone will not take place of drainage, farm manure, crop rotation, or proper tillage and cultivation. The farmer must take the soil as he has it and the types of soil will vary with the different types of materials of which it is composed. The addition of agricultural limestone will make the soil yield more food in digestible form, and therefore could not use or obtain. Clay soils yield to the influence of limestone by changing the texture of breaking large clods into smaller divisions.

London—The British government will ask Japan to evacuate Russian territory without further delay. It was announced by Ataman Chamberlain in the house of commons Monday. Mr. Chamberlain's statement came during discussion of the Japanese government's promise to withdraw.

Lower Cost of Living Gives An Impetus for Railroad

LONE BANK ROBBER MAKES HAUL
Pretends to Open Safety Deposit Box Then Attacks Cashier.

Clayton, Mo.—Gaining access to the vault of the Farmers and Commercial Savings bank, on the pretext of opening a safety deposit box, a lone robber Monday blackkicked Cashier Peter C. Bopp into submission, looted the cash drawer of $1,500 in bills and several hundred dollars' worth of bonds, and escaped in a waiting automobile. The bank is across the street from the St. Louis county court house, where both the sheriff's and constable's offices are located.

TO ORDER JAPAN FROM RUSSIA

Said That Britain Will Demand Evacuation Without Delay.

Chicago—Readjustment of the wages of approximately 400,000 maintenance of way employees of the railroads of the country, effective July 1, in accordance with decreases in the cost of living and wages in similar outside employment since the decision of the board last July, was provided for in a decision by the United States railroad labor board and made public Sunday night.

The decision is expected to reduce present payrolls of the railroads about $45,000,000 per year and to reduce the pay of the majority of the maintenance of way men five cents per hour. But important classes of the employees were given a smaller cut. Under the majority head were included track laborers and other classes usually designated as "common laborers."

The decision was signed by the three railroad members of the board and the three members representing the public group. A dissenting opinion was filed by the three members representing the labor group. The dissenting opinion contended that the wage scale provided in the decision was insufficient to sustain life on the basis of American standards.

The board's decision followed the hearings held on the request of the railroads for wage reductions and the counter request of several classes of employees for increases in pay. These hearings began in Chicago March 5 and ended April 25.

In the decision the board called attention to the fact that the present adjustment was based on previous wage adjustments, the first of which on July 20, 1920, increased the wages of all classes of employees approximately $600,000,000 a year, and the second, the decision of July 1, 1921, which slashed about $450,000,000 from the wages of some 2,500,000 employees in all parts of the country.

STATE MAY AVOID RAIL CLOSING

Governor Expected to Intervene to Prevent Tearing Up P. M. Spurs.

Lansing—Intervention by the state before the Interstate Commerce Commission to prevent the Pere Marquette railroad from abandoning two short lines in Mecosta and Isabella counties is believed likely as the result of action taken by Gov. Greenock. The Governor, after a conference with Prof. David Friday, president of the Michigan Agricultural College, wrote to the Michigan Public Utilities Commission suggesting that a meeting be called to discuss the advisability of the state taking concerted action in opposition to the railroad company on this project. The lines which the Pere Marquette proposed to abandon run from Mecosta to Barryton, 25 miles, and from Remus to Weidman, 20 miles.

WAR GRANTERS TO GET HEARING

Daugherty Appoints Special Assistant to Work on Cases.

Washington—Attorney General Daugherty has announced appointment of former Senator Charles S. Thomas, of Colorado, a Democrat, as one of the special assistants to the attorney general to aid in the prosecution of war frauds together with that of George P. Hoover, of this city. Mr. Daugherty also announced creation of "a special tribunal with-in the department of justice, which will constitute a board of review," to determine whether to proceed with or abandon suits, according to probability of success.

LADY "HUSBAND" UNDER ARREST

Supposed Wife Discovers Fraud After "Marriage" of Three Weeks.

Des Moines, Ia.—After living a year and a half with a woman posing as a "husband" afraid to reveal the deception, Mrs. Janette Simmons caused the arrest of Mrs. Irene Gaul. Mrs. Simmons said Mrs. Gaul, dressed as a man and employed as a restaurant cook, courted her and continued the deception after her marriage. She said three weeks later she learned her "husband" was a woman.

THE HOME OF THE SOUL.

In olden times, it was believed that the seat of the soul was the stomach, most likely for the reason that a man is never so completely used up as when his stomach is out of order. For the cure of ordinary stomach troubles, there is nothing quite so prompt and satisfactory as Chamberlain's Tablets. They strengthen the stomach and enable it to perform its functions naturally. Give them a trial. They only cost a quarter.

MORTGAGE SALE

Whereas, default has been made in the payment of the money secured by a mortgage dated the 16th day of August, A. D. 1920, executed by Floyd Demoyles, and Mable Demoyles, his wife, of the Village of Grayling, County of Crawford, State of Michigan, to Anthony Trudeau, Sr., of the same place, which said mortgage was recorded in the office of the register of deeds of the County of Crawford and State of Michigan in Liber 1 of Mortgages on pages 275 and 277 on the 17th day of August A. D. 1920 at one o'clock p. m.

And whereas the amount claimed to be due on said mortgage at the date of this notice is the sum of three hundred ninety one and 84/100 ($391.84) dollars of principal and interest, and the further sum of thirty ($30.00) dollars as an attorney fee stipulated for in said mortgage, and which is the whole amount claimed to be unpaid on said mortgage and no suit or proceeding having been instituted at law or in equity to recover the debt now remaining secured by said mortgage or any part thereof, whereby the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of said power of sale in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises therein described at public auction to the highest bidder at the front door of the court house in the Village of Grayling, in said County of Crawford, on the 3rd day of August, A. D. 1922, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, which said premises are described as follows, to-wit:

All that certain piece or parcel of land situate and being in the Village of Grayling, County of Crawford, and State of Michigan, described as Lot Nine, of Block Thirteen, of Hadley Second Addition to the Village of Grayling, according to the recorded plat thereof.

Dated May 3rd, 1922.
Anthony Trudeau, Mortgagee.

Homer L. Fitch, Attorney for Mortgagee, Business Address: Grayling, Mich. 5-4-13.

MORTGAGE SALE

Whereas, default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage, dated the 5th day of March, 1920, executed by Fred Sholts and Edna Sholts, wife, to Eliza J. Brott, which said mortgage was recorded in the office of the register of deeds of Crawford County, Michigan, in Liber B of mortgages on page 310, on March 5, 1920, and which said mortgage was assigned by Eliza J. Brott, to William H. Wallace on February 21, 1920 and which assignment is recorded in the office of the register of deeds of Crawford County, Michigan, in Liber C of mortgages on page 633, on March 28, 1920.

And whereas, the amount claimed to be due on said mortgage at the date of this notice is $197.92 principal and interest and the further sum of $25.00 attorney fee as provided for in said mortgage and no suit or proceeding having been instituted at law or in equity to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof, whereby the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale and in pursuance to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by sale of the premises therein described at public auction to the highest bidder at the front door of the Court house in the village of Grayling, Crawford County, Michigan, on July 26, 1922, at one o'clock in the afternoon, which premises are described as follows:

The east half of the southeast quarter of section twenty, in township twenty-two, north range three west, excepting one acre of the southeast corner used for school purposes, Beaver Creek Township, Crawford County, Michigan. Dated April 25, 1922.

William H. Wallace, Assignee of Mortgage.
Merle F. Nellist, Attorney for Assignee of Mortgage, Business address, Mio, Michigan. 4-27-13.

NOTICE

Whereas, default has been made in the payment of money secured by a mortgage dated the seventh day of December A. D. 1904, executed by George Mahon and Nettie Mahon, his wife, then of the Village of Grayling, County of Crawford and State of Michigan, to Marius Hanson of the same place, which said mortgage was recorded in the office of the register of deeds in the County of Crawford and State of Michigan in Liber E of Mortgages on pages 588 and 589 on the eighth day of September A. D. 1905 at twelve o'clock M.

And whereas the amount claimed to be due on said mortgage at the date of this notice is the sum of Three hundred forty six and 96/100ths dollars, and the further sum of fifteen dollars, as statutory attorney fee, and which is the whole amount claimed to be unpaid on said mortgage, and no suit or proceeding having been instituted at law or in equity to recover the debt now remaining secured by said mortgage or any part thereof, whereby the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative.

Now Therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the said power of sale in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises therein described at public auction to the highest bidder at the front door of the court house in the Village of Grayling in said County of Crawford, that being the place wherein is held the Circuit Court for the County of Crawford, on the seventeenth day of June, A. D. 1922 at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, which said premises are described as follows, to-wit:

All those certain pieces or parcels of land situate and being in the Village of Grayling in the County of Crawford and State of Michigan, and described as follows, to-wit: Lots Five and Six of Block Eight of Hadley Second Addition to the Village of Grayling, Michigan, according to the recorded plat thereof.
Dated March 21st 1922.

CHILD LABOR LAW HELD INVALID

Supreme Court Decides That Rights of States Were Usurped.

Washington—The child labor law has been declared unconstitutional by the supreme court.

The law, enacted in 1919, was intended to regulate employment of children in any mill, cannery, workshop, factory or manufacturing establishment, under the age of 14, or in any mine or quarry under 16 by imposing an excise tax of 10 per cent on the net annual profits of those employing such labor. It was attacked on the ground that it attempted to regulate an exclusively state function, in violation of the federal constitution and the tenth amendment and was defined as a mere excise tax levied by congress under its power of taxation.
